Utdrag från e-mail jag, KJ, fick idag, 16/7 2008:

Nej, Todd säger inte bow, utan bam.

Engelsk ordbok beskriver ordet så här: to cheat, hoax, bamboozle, mystification, a chock-and-bull story

Bamboozle – to mystify for purposes of fraud, to cheat, to swindle, to bewilder, confuse, to practise trickery

Hittar att det betyder svindlare, bedragare mm

Så här står det om fraud - an act or course of deception deliberately practised to gain unlawful or unfair advantage, deceiful person, a humbug, a plot, a snare.

Deceit - mislead

Vilken skillnad det gör!!!

Detta borde människorna var uppmärksamma på, eller hur?

Jag sökte lite själv på nätet "what does bam mean?" och blev då mycket förvånad att BAM (fast de uttalar det olika) finns inom hinduismen/buddismen... SKRÄMMANDE!!!

On the way to Baba Dham, each kawaria calls the other "Bam" which stands for Siva, or Shankar. It's an ancient name of Siva. All through the pilgrimage, the kawarias walk barefooted. They hear about Siva, tell about Siva, write about Siva. Whatever they do, they do for Siva. The skies resound with slogans like "Bol Bam," meaning, "Speak Siva;" "Age Bam, Pichhe Bam, Daye Bam, Baye Bam," "Siva is ahead, Siva is behind, Siva is on the right and Siva is on the left." Another common slogan is, "Baba Nagaria Dur Hai, Jana Jarur Hai," "Baba's place is far ahead, but we need to reach there." It is very pleasant to call out these slogans loudly or chant them as mantras.

The Hindoos having become acute metaphysicians, thought themselves superior to every being in the universe.
Further on in the same work other names occur. The Yakshas are a species of demons living in the earth and waters, often represented as malignant in their disposition towards man. The Mahoragas are the genii of the large serpent called in Chinese the Mang. The Rakshasas resemble the Yakshas, but they have not the power like them to assume any shape at pleasure. When they appear to men it must be in their own form. They live in the forest of Himâla, and feed on the flesh of the dead (vide Hardy's Manual of Buddhism). The "Brahmas" (Fan; formerly Bam, or Vam) are the inhabitants of the heaven called "Brahma-loka" (Fan-t'ien), over which Fan-t'ien-wang (Mahabrahma) or the chief Brahma presides. The Pretas, in Chinese, kwei, "demon," are the inhabitants of the narakas or "subterranean" and "other prisons" called ti-yü, "hell." Many of them formerly belonged to the world of men. Some are condemned by Yama to certain prisons. Others haunt the graves where their former
